* As there exists no means of obtaining information as to the quantity of goods liable to Customs Duty, which are consumed in each division of the United Kingdom, it has only been possible to give the Customs Revenue collected in Ireland and Scotland respectively, according to the terms of the Order of the House of Commons.

These figures bear no definable relation to the burden falling on the taxpayer, and cannot properly be used for purposes of comparison. It is possible that a very large proportion of the dutiable commodities imported for consumption in Ireland is charged at the Port of Liverpool.

† These amounts include the sums of 3,769,439 £ and 4,656,310 £ received from British Spirit Duty in Ireland and Scotland respectively. Of these sums it is estimated that 3,579,068 £ and 3,935,676 £ represent the duty paid in respect of British spirits actually consumed in Ireland and Scotland, and the balance, viz., 1,030,374 £ and 833,732 £, the duty on spirits removed from Ireland and Scotland to be consumed in the other divisions of the United Kingdom.

These Balances represent the contributions of Ireland and Scotland respectively to the National Charge on account of the Civil List, the National Debt, the Navy and Army on Foreign Stations, the Diplomatic and Consular Services, Grants in aid of Colonies, and other expenses common to more than one division of the United Kingdom, including the services of many Public Departments, in which the Cost incurred for Ireland and for Scotland cannot be even estimated with accuracy.

The Return has been laid on the Table, in compliance with the directions of the House of Commons, but the Treasury cannot be responsible for the accuracy of the information contained therein. It has been the aim of Parliament to keep the accounts of the income and expenditure of the United Kingdom as the accounts of one country; and the Treasury are therefore unable to assign the same received and spent accurately to three separate countries.
